

Personal Glimpses

CPYRGHT

WHEN Vice Adm. William F. Raborn, head of CIA, was in the Pentagon, his staff operated most of the time on a standard six-day workweek, often longer. To a subordinate who complained of pressing domestic errands, Raborn advised, "I recognize you can't use Saturdays to get groceries any more. Use Thursday evenings or, even better, get your wife to do the marketing the way I do. That's called leadership."

—Tucson Arizona Star